Approved for 1.5 CME credits

Presenter- Dr. Michael Mayo

Opioid overdose continues to be a major public health problem in the United States. It has contributed significantly to accident deaths among those who use or misuse illicit and prescription drugs. In fact, U.S. overdose deaths reached 64,000 – or about 175 per day – in 2016.

Physicians and other providers can make a major contribution toward reducing the toll of opioid analgesics- heroin and pain pills.
